"WIRELESS" FOR CHINA

With reference to the statement that the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company has made a £2,000,000 contract with the Chinese Government, under which the company is to construct numerous high and low power wireless stations upon highly remunerative terms with payment fully secured. Mr. Godfrey Isaacs, managing director of the Marconi Company. says that he is not aware of any such contract having been signed by his directors. Mr. Isaacs added that he had been negotiating for such a contract for the bast two years, and it was quite possible it had been signed on behalf of the Chinese Government, although not by himself or Any of his directors.

minent official that the contract is for the construction of eight high-power Marconi wireless stations, in addition to low-power stations, and that payment therefor is fully secured. The price to be paid for each station is considerably in excess of that being paid by the British Government under their contract, although the high-power stations are to have the advantages of allthe recent improvements. The importance of the matter to the Marconi interests is that not only are they obtaining an impregnable position in China, but that they will thereby be enabled to link up their other stations both East and West. The negotiations have been of an unusually delicate character owing to the anscepti-bilities of the natives, but it is believed that every precaution has been taken not. only to provide against any local outbreak of ill-will, but it is even hoped that native sentiment has been very largely appeased.

A DEBT TO ENGLAND.

In the graceful speech in which Herr Dernberg acknowledged, with generous candour, Germany's debt to England, the late German Secretary of State for the Colonies laid special stress on the solidarity maintained between the English and the Germans before the native races. He very rightly added that the domination of the white man depends on the prestige of his colour, and that no one white race can be humilitated without all receiving injury. But Herr Dernberg went on from the consideration of Colonial problems to the example weich England bas given to Germany and Germany to England in social reform. Here we certainly cannot claim the pre-eminence which he accords us in the domain of Colonial policy, and each nation has still much to learn from the other. But the German statesman's insistence on the work which England has done in this direction brought into yet stronger relief the friendliness towards this country which ran through the whole of his speech. It is of happy omen for the furuse, and the more so because the speach was addressed to a gathering of Berlin Merchants and Manuschurers, who had gone were the England .- Globe,

THE DINNER HOUR.

One of the most outstanding yet scarcely recognised features of social life in England to-day is, says The a pastry-cook's about noon for a Times; the way in which during slight repast of buns, tarts, etc., modern times we have increased the number of daily meals. So marked is this that there might be ventured tion the greater the number of feed- habit grew so slowly that a writer ing times per diem. In support in 1855 described lunch as "hardly the two printery and statutory meals, and how these have developed into the modern routine of meals forms a curious by path of history. Down to about the loth century dinner was served between 5 and 10 o'clock in the morning and supper between 3 and 5 in the afternoon. These were the only meals of the day, for breakfast was no more than the morning draught of ale or wine with a crust of bread on rising. It was with no more refreshment than this that Pepys, as also his predecessors and successors, began the day's work at 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning, very much as the artisan and labourer to-day still does with a cup of coffee at home or the rum and coffees of the early opening publichouse.

There being no breakfast, dinner was served proportionately early, the medieval hour being 9 a.m. Under Elizabeth, the court and the nation at large dined at 11 and supped about

6. Gradually and curiously these hours were advanced and in the 17th century dinner was served at o'clock in fashionable circles, though until 1752 the undergraduates ut Oxford and Cambridge still dired at noon. Under Anne 2 o'clock was the dinner hour and the forward movement continued, assisted by the growing fashion for chocolate to be served on rising and the habit of not rising so 'early. Though George II refused to dine later than 2 o'clock the fashiomable hour was 3 or o'clock. These innovations had many distinguished opponents. Pope

Mr. Speaker Onslow in district, overlooking the Botanics | 1759 declared it was "one of the griefs and burdens" of his life that Parliament had begun to sit shamefully late as 2 o'clock, Horage Walpole mournfully objected to dining at 4 because it prevented him beginning his evening until ing proceeded to punctuate the interval by the insertion of lunch. Like breakfast luncheon began modestly. An American visitor to London in 1810 noted the custom of a visit to and a glass of whey, at a cost of about 6d. or 8d." But this refreshment expanded—as is the habit of the thesis that the higher, or at least refreshments-into a meal scarcely the more complex, a social organisa- distinguishable from dinner. Yet the might be cited the evidence that it a recognised meal. It is one, howwas only with the 19th century that ever, that ought not to be neglectthree meals a day became the accept- ed. Nor has it been, for with the ed custom of the country. Dinner growth of London and the rise of and supper are what may be called the residential suburbs, the early breakfasts and late dinners necessituted by the journey to and fro has made a midday meal essential to the city worker; while in social circles luncheon has taken the place of breakfast as an entertainment, without however affecting breakfast as

The four o'clock," which some 30 or 40 years ago was fashionable innovation, is now an institution among all classes. Even in city offices and business houses the cup of tea with biscuits is an accepted and acceptthle feature of the afternoon, though what the merchant or banker of 50 years ago would have said to such an infringement of commercial routine it is not difficult to imagine. The introduction of women typists in offices was responsible for the custom, though no such reason underlies the ten interval which is now a recognised, but "not entirely appreciated, > interval in county cricket. Incidentally the institution of afternoon ten, which, by the addition of sandwiches, etc., to the original bread and butter has become in itself not negligible as a meal, led to the still further postponement of dinner so that 8 or even 9 o'clock is no unusual hour. In this as in so many other social customs, the lead was given by the late King Edward as Prince of Wales, and it may be recalled that when he invited General Gordon to dinner after his return from the Sudan, the General begged to be excused as at the hour named

THE COMING OF THE NIGHT CLUB. Dinner has thus been placed within hailing distance of midnight, so that entering the theatre at 9 and leaving soon after 11, man has discovered that supper is a social opportunity if not a physical necessity. So much is this the case that to escape the time limit placed by the law on supper at the Savoy or the Carlton, there has been the recent remarkable opening of night-clubs With dinner served at what had for which no modern parallel can be found. NAVY'S OIL DEAL. THE BOUNDARY QUESTION.

A Reuter's telegram appeared in The Daily Telegraph ' recently, stating that Kasr-i-Shirim and the at Chiasurkh, belonging the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, had been found by the Frontier Delimitation Commissioners' to be in Turkish and not in Persian territory.

I understand that the statement that the oilfield possessed by the Anglo-Rersian Oil Company at Chiasurkh has been found by the Frontier Delimitation Commissioners be in Turkish, and not in Persian, territory is accurate. The fact has been known for many months, and an opportunity of safeguarding the British interests affected has been found in the Anglo-Turkish negotiations which for more than one year have been in progress.

As foreshadowed in "The Daily Telegraph" of December 1 last, on the recommendation of the British Government a concession of the oilfields in the vilayets of Bagdad and Mosul appears to have been granted to an Ottoman company formed under the name of "The Turkish Oilfield Company."

A participation of 50 per cent. the capital of that company and the right of appointing, the president the board of directors has granted to the Anglo-Persian Company. A share of 25 per cent. has been secured by various interests, which seem to centre more or less on the Shell Company. Furthermore, it is reported in some quarters that the Deutsche Bank (which under the concession of the Bagdad Railway of March, 1903, is entitled to the exploitation of the mineral resources within a twenty miles radius from the railway), together with some other groups, has obtain-COMMERCIAL LETTERS OF CRE. ed a 25 per cent. share. The Anglo-Persian Company and the Deutsche cent: towards the constitution of a 5 per cent, share granted to an Armenian gentleman, who is a British protege, M. Gulbenkan. pecting and to apportion the shares, bith the capital has been subscribed and a preliminary syndicate constituted. The capital amounts to £160,000, with a reserve of £250,000. Besides the Turkish Oil Company, a British group has been formed for exploiting the oil fields in Syria. The denunciation in several Russian newspapers of the British Government's action in taking shares in the Anglo-Persian Oil Company has caused a distinctly bad impression in Persian circles, says another correspondent. It is feared that the Russian Press, which was quiet before the deal, is now criticizing adversely so that Russia may be able claim compensation in the northem part of Persia, Kasr-i-Shirim forms the south-westerly point of the Russian sphere in Persia, which would be affected by any adjudication of the district as Turkish.

It is conceivhere. In the days of ordinary bridge the right to know what convention that if a declaration is obviously a be could be directed merely to win ciple still holds good, but in practice it has become impossible to run through the gamut of possible conventions in any preliminary inquiry. Under these circumstances the fundumental alteration has been made of giving spades one value only, viz., O, and allowing the dealer and each subsequent player to pass. If all of them pass the deal passes. The one other alteration affecting the score is the bonus of 100 points now given for grand slam, and 50 points for little slam.

REDRESS FOR OFFENCES.

The other laws which have been inserted or varied are those which deal mainly with what might be called informalities or inaccuracies. It is always recognised that any four people who sit down to play auction ! do so with the intention of playing in the fairest possible way, but, with all the good, will in the world, cirt. cumstances must srise sometides

If the dummy call the attention of his partner to the fact that he is about to lead from the wrong hand, the adversary on the left of the declarer may require that the lead be made from that hand.

Lastly, it is provided that a player until the deal has been completed. () YETERS Presh Fried, or Staward, Wilmington may not look at any of his cards Should he do so and a card be afterwards exposed, the salversary on him.

oft shall have the option of allowing the deal to stand or not.

FUTURE PROSPECTS. Many of these alterations and additions supply a long-felt want, and although on certain points there are differences of opinion, it is unlikely on the whole that there will be many to find fault with the new rules, Whether the game, as it stands, is destined to have a permanent hold is another matter. There are now a number of players who wish to introduce into the game the counterpart of the misere hand at solo whist which has, as its principle, the losing instead of the making of tricks, but is is probable that this, in conjunction with the ordinary game, would be too scientific to be popular.

The history of bridge has been one of changes. Its ancestor, whist, has become almost a memory; bridge proper is scarcely played; ordinary, auction, with its values of 2, 4, 6, 8, and 12 respectively, has held its ground with many of the best players, while Royal Auction has appealed to the more general taste. .Unless it is found that the present rules and values prove to be to the advantage of the good player to an appreciable extent, they should be adequate to the general needs for some time to come. It must always be remembered that it is by no means an easy thing to draw a line between un offence for which a specific penalty should be provided and one which should be left for the etiquette of the game to prevent. The latter class of offences are, in a sense, the more serious, not only in themselves, but from the fact that it is impossible to penalise an intonation of the voice or hesitation.

fluctuation arising from these causes, but owing to the difficulty of estimating small differences in light it is doubtful if any practical use has been or can made of such researches, for graver errors are introduced by physiological causes and the exercise of individual judgment. The limit of accuracy in photometry is soon reached. The eye can judge of the equality of two lights, but is incapable of judging of differences with any degree of accuracy. In other branches of physics, where delicate and exact measurement is needed, the scales and standards are trustworthy, and it is generally possible to magnify small amounts, till they become easily perceptible. > This appeal, as argued, appears to me to depend entirely on the construction of the contract between the plaintiff and Arndt and Co. of the 31st July, 1912, a portion of which was guaranteed by the defendant and the contract of guarantee itself. circumstances are shortly as follows-One vincial Government to sell to him on very favourable terms the old bronze and iron quantity in the province; he on the same day that he got his contract signed trans ferred it to Arndt and Co. Neitler al these people had any money, and arndt and Co., four days later, on 31st July, agreed to sell to the plaintiffs this bronza and iron. The agreement reduced into writing and signed on that day, but it had beetzsubject of earlier negotiation.

tine of the terms imposed by the Kanngtung Government was the deposit of $200,000, and the plaint ff , so that this requirement should be met, advinced to Arndt and Co. such a sum. Theirsqui advanced was in Hongkong Currency whilst Bradney (representing H.E. Majorthat required by the Government was General F. H. King (Assistant for this also the guarantor says that he is not liable, the guarantee having been signed after this repayment. As I' have said everything seems to me to turn on the construction of two documents, and I will now consider them. It is first material to observe that the agreement of the 31st July, though it recites the agreement between Wong and the Government, nowhere speaks of the deposit, not even were the payment of Hongkong $200,000

"which shall be deducted from the said purchase price between the said firm and the said company rate of 25% of the invoice amount"; the payment purports to be made on account of the purchase price of the goods, and it is to be worked off by credits from time to time, the amount due to the plaintiffs thus varying from time to time. The rest of this clause provides for the repayment of the balance, if any, at the completion o Clause 11 contains the guarantee. : What is to be guaranted is the return of the two lakha or of such part thereof as may be unappropriated from from time to time in

Began as Ringworm. Left Bald Patch, then Scaly with Hard Crust-like Substance. Cuticura Soan and Ointment Cured Her.

11: Ford Rd., Cosport, Hants, Eng. "My little girl's head was bad for nearly two years. It first began as ringworm. The hair came out in handfuls, leaving a hald patch, and then is became scaly with a hard crast-like substance. It would weep occasionally and be soce. I kept her home from school Ely it looked so badly.

and it was very britated and of course was a great worry. I tried several remedias without success, but that did not seem to do to much good. I used Cuticurs Bosp and Ointment them. The first application. seemed to ease it, so I persevered with them and it soon got in the way for the better and now it is all right. Cuticura Soap and Cintment cured my child, and her hair is growing." (Signed) Mrs. Selina M. Peters; May 22, 1012.

Cuticura Scap and Cuticura Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them.. Sold everywhere. A sample of each with 32-p. book from from nearest depote F. Newbery & Sons. 27, Charterhouse Sq., London: R. Towns & Co., Sydney, N.S.
